Description

Queen's University is embarking on a search for its Provost and Vice-Principal (Academic) – a key member of the university senior team who plays a pivotal leadership role alongside peers across the entire university.

The Role of Provost and Vice-Principal (Academic)

Reporting to the Principal and Vice-Chancellor, the Provost is the chief academic, operating, and budget officer for the university. In this capacity, the Provost provides strategic leadership in all areas of responsibility, supporting the vision of the Principal and Vice-Chancellor, and working in close collaboration with the Vice-Principals. The Provost oversees the work of the Deputy Provost, six Faculty Deans, and several Vice-Provosts and Associate Vice-Principals. Through collegial relationships, the Provost oversees the internal operations and activities of the university to ensure that all aspects of administration support the academic and research missions of Queen's. Success for the next Provost will be directly related to their ability to balance operational and academic leadership, to deliver on the university's strategic priorities, and to build a strong working relationship to support the Principal and Vice-Chancellor in positioning Queen's for future success in academic and research excellence.

The successful candidate must hold a PhD, or equivalent terminal degree, and be appointable at the rank of full professor. Candidates must have a strong record of academic and scholarly achievement, in teaching and in fostering pedagogical and curricular excellence and innovation, an understanding of, and commitment to, academic values, and to the cultivation and enrichment of a community devoted to learning and discovery. The ideal candidate has demonstrated their commitment to the values of equity, diversity, and inclusion and to indigeneity, reconciliation, and decolonization through championing them as integral components.
