

Indigenous.Link

Canada's fastest growing Indigenous career portal, Careers.Indigenous.Link is pleased to introduce a new approach to job searching for Indigenous Job Seekers of Canada. Careers.Indigenous.Link brings simplicity, value, and functionality to the world of Canadian online job boards.

Through our partnership with Indigenous.Links Diversity Recruitment Program, we post jobs for Canada's largest corporations and government departments. With our vertical job search engine technology, Indigenous Job Seekers can search thousands of Indigenous-specific jobs in just about every industry, city, province and postal code.

Careers.Indigenous.Link offers the hottest job listings from some of the nation's top employers, and we will continue to add services and enhance functionality ensuring a more effective job search. For example, during a search, job seekers have the ability to roll over any job listing and read a brief description of the position to determine if the job is exactly what they're searching for. This practical feature allows job seekers to only research jobs relevant to their search. By including elements like this, Careers.Indigenous.Link can help reduce the time it takes to find and apply for the best, available jobs.

The team behind Indigenous.Link is dedicated to connecting Indigenous Peoples of Canada with great jobs along with the most time and cost-effective, career-advancing resources. It is our mission to develop and maintain a website where people can go to work!

Description

Capilano University is named after Chief Joe Capilano, an important leader of the Skwxwu7mesh (Squamish) Nation of the Coast Salish Peoples. Our campuses are located on the territories of the Liá»wat, xÊ·mÉ™Î, kÊ·É™Á»·É™m (Musqueam), shishalh (Sechelt), Skwxwu7mesh (Squamish) and SÉ™Á»·ilwÉ™ta/Selilwitulh (Tseil-Waututh) Nations.

The English Department at Capilano University seeks a teacher/scholar/writer who will help to teach a range of courses, including English 107: Indigenous Literature and Film, English 359: Indigenous Literatures, English 100: University Writing Strategies, and other courses that match their expertise. For the purposes of this position, Indigenous literatures includes storytelling in all its myriad forms. The English Department values the ability to teach, write, and think in settings outside of academia and welcomes scholars who are engaged in their communities, as well as scholars with teaching experience in university-level literature/storytelling or writing courses. The successful candidate will show a strong commitment to mentoring and supporting students from a wide range of backgrounds. The successful candidate may have the opportunity to select a workload that includes a combination of both teaching and other duties related to the strengthening of relationships with our Indigenous communities and supporting their fellow faculty members in their Decolonization and Indigenization efforts.

CapU is currently undergoing an exciting phase of growth, with new BA and BSc programs under development across the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, including in English. The Faculty of Arts & Social Sciences' new academic model highlights regional and experiential based learning, with opportunities for land school courses, and connections to the sea-to-sky community.

The English Department at CapU is committed to diversifying and supporting our teaching faculty. Candidates will most likely have experience teaching writing and/or literature/storytelling at the undergraduate level. A specialization in Indigenous literatures, Indigenous feminisms, queer/two-spirit studies, decolonial literatures, or other modes of storytelling (e.g. film, music, visual arts, etc) is preferred, but scholars in all fields of literature/storytelling and creative writing will be considered.

Education Requirements

While a PhD is preferred, an MA in Literature or a closely related field is required in-hand or near completion at the time of application. For creative writers and storytellers, a master's degree and publication project will be considered equivalent. We also invite applicants with a combination of scholarship, lived experience, and community engagement.

Letters of application should address the candidate's philosophy of undergraduate teaching and their ability to foster an equitable and inclusive community within the University. In alignment with a Special Program approved by the BC Office of the Human Rights Commissioner, the roles and responsibilities for this position entail delivery of Indigenous content and, as such, applicants who self-identify as Indigenous or having Indigenous ancestry may be given priority in the recruitment process. Applicants are encouraged to self-identify in their cover letter. Applicants are also encouraged to describe how their lived experience as an Indigenous person informs their scholarship and/or community work and to outline their experience working with Indigenous communities/students.

Applicants who are invited to interview will be asked to prepare a 10-15 minute teaching demo as well as provide at least one sample syllabus. Previous teaching evaluations and/or community endorsements are optional though encouraged if readily available to the candidate.

Please note that candidates must reside in BC at the time of hire. The position will remain open until filled.

How to Apply
